3. Enforcement of the rights of data subjects

A data subject may request information about the processing of his/her personal data, furthermore he/she may request the rectification of his/her personal data or its erasure – except if data processing is regulated by legal rules – such requests should be addressed to the contact possibilities of the Company. In the event when a data subject withdraws his/her consent for processing, it without affecting the lawfulness of processing based on consent before exercises the right to withdraw.

A data subject may give consent during the registration to optional data processing, for his/or her e-mail address will be made available to other participants of the event in the online platform. This consent withdrawable separately any time during the event.

The Company is obliged to transfer such request or objection within three days from its receipt to the Head of the Organisational Unit that is vested with responsibility and authority regarding data processing.

The Head of the Organisational Unit vested with responsibility and authority should give a properly understandable answer to the request regarding the processing of the data of the data subject, latest within 25 – in the case when right to object was exercised within 15 – days in writing from the receipt of the request/objection.

Such notification should cover the information specified in Section II., Article 13 – 15. of the GDPR. if the notification of the person concerned may not be refused under the said Regulation.

The notification in general is free of charge, the Company charges reimbursable costs only in the case specified in Section III. Article 12. (5) of GDPR.

The Company refuses any application only for reasons specified in Section III., Article (12) of GDPR., which should be justified in accordance with GDPR in writing.

For the period necessary for the evaluation of the objection submitted by the data subject against the processing of his/her data – but at most for 5 days – the Head of the Organisational Unit responsible for data processing will suspend data processing, examine the groundedness of such objection, makes decision and notifies the applicant in accordance with the GDPR.

If the objection was justified, the Head of the Organisational Unit responsible for data processing will act in accordance with GDPR.

In the event when a data subject exercises his/her rights but the case cannot be decided unambiguously, the Head of the Organisational Unit responsible for data processing may send the documents of the case together with his/her position related to the case to the internal Data Protection Officer and request his/her position, and the internal Data Protection Officer (dataprotectionofficer@eli-alps.hu) shall respond within three days.

The Company will reimburse any losses caused through unlawful processing of the data of a data subject or through breaching data security requirements, and/or will pay the restitution becoming due in the case when the data processor designated by the Company violated rights relating to personality. The Data Controller will be exempted from the liability for damages in respect of any losses and from the obligation to pay restitution if it can prove that such loss or the violation of the rights relating to personality of the data subject was caused by an inevitable cause outside the scope of data controlling. Similarly, the loss will not be reimbursed if it was a consequence of the deliberate and grossly negligent behaviour of the claimant.

The data subject may request legal remedy from or may submit his/her complaint to the Hungarian National Authority for Data Protection and Freedom of Information (1125 Budapest, Szilágyi Erzsébet fasor 22/C, 1530 Budapest, Pf.: 5; www.naih.hu) or may turn to the court of justice competent in his/her place of residence or stay. The data subject should contact the Data Protection Officer (dataprotectionofficer@eli-alps.hu; 6728 Szeged, Wolfgang Sandner street 5.) of the Company in connection with processing his/her personal data.
